The WESTSIDE

We've often thought, while watching the feminine throngs about our place "What would the Dry Goods business amount to, if it wasn't for the ladies?" Equally pertinent, however, is the natural retort: "What would the ladies do if it wasn't for the Dry Goods men?" We do our share in the mutual benefit business by opening up this week about

The Passing of Summer

"The melancholy days are here, the saddest of the year," but to many they usher in a season which might most appropriately be termed the "gladdest of the year": the season of social festivities, balls, parties, etc.

To us it means the arrival of the "Dress Suit Season," and, by the way, speaking of dress suits reminds us: Our facilities for catering to this most important branch of the trade have never been better. We have imported this season a rich range of the most select and correct "full dress" fabrics. We make it a point to intrust this class of work to only the most competent workmen, consequently we produce garments which are in every sense of the word "high class;" faultless in fit, in appearance graceful and elegant.

We respectfully request the consideration of all good dressers at this the advent of the Dress Suit Season.

IN DEFENSE OF PEKIN.

China Making Every Effort to Keep the Japanese From the Capital.

Invasion Hourly Expected at Chee Foo—Recent Military Arrangements.

London, Oct. 1.—A Shanghai dispatch says the appointment of Prince Kung, the emperor's uncle, and the presidents of the foreign boards of admiralty to act as co-directors with Li Hung Chang in the conduct of Chinese affairs, is looked upon in the nature of a coup d-etat. No Chinese soldiers are now in Corea, all of them being concentrated in the vicinity of Moukden and Hung Chung. The Chines transports have gone to Hankow for troops. It is reported that Tao Tai Chen has been found to be implicated in furnishing information regarding Chinese movements tou the Japanese authorities.

The Pall Mall Gazette prints a Chee Foo dispatch dated to-day which says: Japanese cruisers are sighted here daily. An invasion is hourly expected. The dispatch also says it is reported an uprising has occurred in the province of Chan Lung.

The power of the Emperor's uncle, Prince Kung, includes the privilege of at all times entering the imperial palace. Bung Kweit, the emperor's father-in-law has started for Shan Hai Kwang, which is on the road to Peking, with five thousand picked Manchurian soldiers. Preparations for the better defence of Peking are also being energetically pushed. It is expected that the garrison there will be reinforced by twenty thousand Kashgars. Twenty-five thousand troops are being massed at Tung Chow near Peking. The foreign residents of Peking are subjected to constant insult by the natives. A number have been assaulted.

DR. TYNAN'S ESCAPE.

A Wealthy Californian Living in a New York Lodging House.

New York, Oct. 1.—The Sun this morning publishes the following dispatch from Boston in regard to the celebrated Tynan case: "Two years ago this month Dr. Thomas E. Tynan, an octogenarian and wealthy capitalist, mine and land owner, disappeared mysteriously from his home in Modesto, Cal. A week or two after that time John E. Stanton hired lodgings here. He had more than six hundred dollars in gold pieces, knew all about California, but could not be induced to say a word about himself. Stanton was interested in spiritualism. He spent two summers at Onset bay and for two years was an attendant at many such meetings in this city. After one year in Boston Stanton returned from Onset bay apparently poor and lived in poverty on Kneeland street in a lodging house. Soon after he came here Stanton's landlord, Mr. Locker, discovered that he had more than thirty thousand dollars in gold kept in a bag, which he carried everywhere he went. At the suggestion of Mr. Locker he placed his money in a safe deposit vault. His interest in spiritualism placed him in the way of sharps, and several persons whom he had met at the meetings called at his lodgings to borrow money off him. In the meantime a Boston detective recognized in Stanton the missing Dr. Tynan, for whose recovery a reward of one thousand dollars had been offered. He notified the wife that he knew of her husband's whereabouts, asked for the reward, and after some correspondence she replied that she was sure her husband was dead. The detective was informed that the estate, aggregating more than $500,000, had been settled, as the courts had considered Mr. Tynan dead. It was in June, 1893, that Stanton secured lodgings with Mrs. Lerose on Kneeland street. She is also interested in spiritualism. She says: Just about a year ago an old gentleman, who seemed very feeble and was very shabbily dressed, asked to hire a room, and when I showed him a small attic room for $1.50 a month he took it. For a long time I used to see him going out and walking up and down the streets, but knew little about him. He then told me that his name was Dr. Tynan and that he had lived in California. He never said much about his family, but he told me once that I had treated him much better than he had been cared for in his old home, although he was considered wealthy there. He used to go out to the cheap restaurants to get his food, and many a day when he did not seem to have the money to spend for a dinner he would buy a quart of milk and some crackers. One Saturday night in June last he came home from a spiritualist meeting and told me that he had met an old friend, John Slater, the medium whom he had known in California. Some one had called for Dr. Tynan and Slater had recognized the old gentleman when he responded. Mr. Slater went to his home in California right after leaving Boston, and from there to Europe. Late in June Dr. Tynan went to Onset, and two weeks ago last Monday Mr. Slater called there for him. He went to Onset on the following Wednesday and brought Dr. Tynan here on Friday. Two weeks ago yesterday I put Dr. Tynan aboard the train and he started for New York and then for home. As for his having money, I did not know he had it. Now that Dr. Tynan has gone home Detective Sullivan has put in a claim for the reward, and has sued Mrs. Tynan for it, claiming her letters and telegrams are evidence that he furnished her the information which led the old man's restoration to his family."

NEWS OF THE DOMINION.

The St. Thomas Street Railway Gobbled Up by the Big Eastern Company.

McCarthyites Preparing for the Coming General Election for Commons.

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 1.—The hearing of the case against the tug Grace of Dunkirk, which was seized on May 21st last, charged with fishing in Canadian waters, has been concluded. The seizure took place about eight miles from Port Colborne. The international boundary line runs through the middle of Lake Erie, which is about four miles wide at this point. The Dominion cruiser Dolphin, commanded by Captain J. B. Pearson, made the seizure. Much evidence was taken, the owners of the Grace trying to prove that they were south of the boundary.

Montreal, Oct. 1.—The court of review on Saturday confirmed the judgment of the superior court, granting $25 damages to the Canada Revue, in its action against the Monde for having alleged that the publication of the former paper had suspended.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Sir John Gorst arrived here to-day from the coast and had an interview with Hon. Mr. Foster.

Brighton, Ont., Oct. 1.—M. P. Ketchum, owner of the trotting dog "Doc," was found dead in C. E. Lockwood's orchard on Saturday night, with a bullet wound in his right temple. By his side lay the revolver with which he had ended his life. Mr. Ketchum is said to have suffered financial losses on Winnipeg real estate, and this is supposed to have been the cause. About two o'clock the report of a revolver was heard. Those attracted by the shot found Mr. Ketchum lying in the orchard dead. The coroner did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest, placing the cause of death to temporary insanity. The dead man left a widow and two children one of whom is Willie Ketchum, known all over the continent as the driver of "Doc." The funeral, with full Masonic honors, will be held on Tuesday.

Brampton, Ont., Oct. 1.—At an early hour on Sunday morning, George Graham died at his residence, Elizabeth street, aged 76. Mr. Graham has been identified with the county of Peel for many years. He held the position of county treasurer and was also the presiding magistrate of the town for the last 20 years. He was for many years treasurer of the provincial exhibition.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Barrister T. C. Robinette visited Brampton jail on Saturday and had an interview with McWhirrell. Preparations had been made to convey McWhirrell and Williams, sentenced to three years, to Kingston on Tuesday morning, but the death of Mr. George Graham, with whom Sheriff Broddy had been officially and personally associated for many years, will no doubt delay the removal of the prisoners until Wednesday. On Saturday crowds of people visited the jail yard where the scaffold still stands. McWhirrell and Walker were both out inspecting the gallows. Walker acted as master of ceremonies and explained its operations.

Worshippers at the Yonge street Methodist church received a great shock yesterday morning. Just before the service commenced Edith Martin, the 15-year-old daughter of Ed. Martin, builder and contractor, suddenly expired. Mr. Martin, who lives at 13, Shaftesbury Place, is superintendent of the Sunday school. He and his two daughters, Mary and Edith, were sitting in their pew waiting for the service to open, when Edith, without a cry of warning, fell into the lap of her sister. Mr. Martin lifted her up and carried her to the house of Mr. Hall on the other side of the street. Dr. Foster was called in. He at once pronounced her dead and from the appearance of the girl's face, gave it as his opinion that she must have died the instant she fell over in church.

St. Thomas, Oct. 1.—The St. Thomas street railway has been sold to the syndicate which controls the Toronto, London, Cleveland and Montreal street railway systems. The line will be extended and converted into an electric service.

Brief Locals.

—There were five Indians and one white man charged with being found drunk in the dock in the police court this morning. Their cases were disposed of in the usual way.

—To-day has been a brisk one for the registrar of the county court, owing to the fact of so many persons registering declarations of partnership, as required by the act respecting partnerships passed at the last session of the parliament.

—The Rev. Dr. Campbell, on Saturday evening, at the manse, 173 Pandora avenue, united in marriage Mr. Donald Campbell and Miss Annie B. Barr. The groomsman and bridesmaid were Mr. J. B. McMillan and Miss M. J. Webster. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left in the evening for Vancouver by the Charmer, on their way to Ashcroft, where they intend to make their home.

—Miss White, daughter of Madame Laird, and Ross H. McMillan were quietly married on Saturday, and left on the steamship Umatilla for California on their bridal trip. The ceremony was performed at Christ Church Cathedral by Canon Beanlands. The bride was attended by Miss L. Hartnagle and the groom was supported by Robert R. Cooper. Only the immediate relatives and friends of the couple were present. Mrs. McMillan is one of the handsomest and most popular young ladies in the city and Mr. McMillan is well known among business men, standing foremost among the younger men in that class.

Brief Locals.

—The provincial fire escapes act came into force to-day.

—One drunken sealer came very near being drowned in a bath tub on Saturday.

—The search on Saturday and Sunday for the body of J. B. Carmichael proved fruitless.

—David Ross was given a month in jail to-day by Magistrate Macrae on the charge of supplying liquor to Indians.

—R. Johnson, summoned for vagrancy, failed to appear in the police court to-day. A warrant was ordered issued for him.

—R. W. Holmes has been summoned for refusing to pay wages, and the case will be heard in the city police court on Wednesday.

—Ole Olsen created a disturbance in a street car on Friday last, and in the police court this morning was fined $10 and $3.50 costs.

—V. Dolyallce, for being drunk and supplying liquor to Indians, got a total of three months' imprisonment after a trial in the police court this morning.

SAMOAN TROUBLE.

Rebels Although defeated Are Still Very Troublesome.

Apia, Samoa, Sept. 12.—Per steamer Monowai to San Francisco—When the previous mail steamer departed the warships of Great Britain and Germany and just finished shelling the strongholds of the Atua rebels. Then it was generally felt that the lesson, although severe had been deserved, and that the final result would be a lasting peace. It is believed, too, that the British and German commanders were able to make a similar demonstration against the rebels of Aana. A few days later, however, the commanders held a meeting and immediately afterward the senior captains waited upon King Malietoa and informed him that he would receive no further assistance. This action surprised not only the king, but Chief Justice Ide and President Schmidt, who had welcomed the interference of the naval authorities. The captains, however, were positive in their refusal to render any further aid which might involve their firing upon the rebels. In this dilemma President Schmidt, who has been accused of sympathizing with the rebel party of Tamasese, journeyed to Aana, where the king's troops had gone a few days before to await the arrival of the warships, which, it was believed, was to assist in a demonstration against the rebels. Upon his arrival there President Schmidt found that the lately defeated Atua rebels had joined their Aana friends, thus showing that the warships' shells had not greatly terrified them. President Schmidt informed the authorities at Apia later that there was a possibility of a temporary peace being patched up, and upon his suggestion two warships, one bearing King Malietoa, were dispatched to Aana.

The king and the commanders sent word to the rebel Tamasese that he must come on board and "ifo" (submit) to the kings that he and his followers must disperse and surrender 100 rifles and that they must deliver certain escaped convicts who were with them. At first Tamasese demurred, but he finally agreed to the conditions. Then Tamasese and his followers, after having gone through the form of "ifo" before the kings were allowed to depart from the warship. They gave up one hundred rifles as agreed, and their forces and the king's dispersed. Here there was a general impression however, that the peace would be of short duration. This, it is learned, has been the case. The land commission's surveyor, who was sent down from Aana to survey some disputed lands, was forcibly resisted by rebel natives, who, under Tamasese, were already organized for another and prolonged resistance. What will be the outcome is hard to conjecture.

Te Mamea, a powerful Samoan chief, who led the delegation which visited the United States during President Hayes' administration and negotiated a treaty with the United States, is dead. He stood high in Samoan councils.

There is an unusual amount of sickness among the foreign residents here, and the one physician in Apia is quite unable to attend to all the cases.

HAWAIIAN POLITICS.

Rival Parties Choosing Their Standard Bearers.

Honolulu, Sept. 21.—Early on the morning of the 19th two boats arrived here containing Captain Walters and the crew of the G. N. Wilcox, a German bark which had gone ashore the night before on the bleak shore of Molokai, ten miles away from the leper settlement. The bark will be a total loss and it is very doubtful whether more than a few hundred dollars' worth of her cargo can be saved. The bark was worth $75,000 and was insured for $60,000. The cargo was valuable and was fully insured in England and Germany.

A meeting has been called by the American Union party for to-morrow night, when the first steps toward putting candidates in the field for the coming elections will be taken. There has been no move as yet on the part of the Royalists to nominate any candidate, although they will undoubtedly do so in a short time. Several of the leaders of the ex-queen's cause have recently taken the oath of allegiance to the republic, among them being Paul Newmann, the queen's attorney, and Dan Lofan, editor of the Bulletin, which has been an ardent opponent of the government since its start.

ORIENTAL WARRIORS.

Observations of a British Naval Officer in the Orient.

Seattle, Sept. 30.—A letter from the scene of hostilities in the war between China and Japan was received yesterday by G. B. Nicoll, of this city, from his brother-in-law, J. D. Henwood, staff surgeon on the British man-of-war Severn. H writes:

"At Sea, Sept. 1.

"Now a little about ourselves. In my last letter, which was very warlike, we had just arrived at Cheefoo, where we have stayed nearly ever since. The Chinese themselves were very glad to see us there, saying 'No Japanese come now.'.

"There is absolutely no war news. It is the most peaceable war I ever heard of. We hear all sorts of yarns and read all sorts in the papers. If one reads the Shanghai papers the Chinese are getting the best of it, and in the Yokohama papers the opposite is published. [illegible] Corea, and I am inclined to think the Chinese have lately the advantage, particularly as the Coreans are pounding the Japanese, whom they don't like. The Japs landed 6000 men at Pingyang a short time ago (that is the boundary between China and Corea), not knowing any Chinese were there and they were driven back to their ships with great loss. That is, I believe, authentic. The papers say that the Japs have since landing in Corea lost two thousand men from fighting and sickness. The men-of-war on both sides do nothing. I don't really think either wants to meet the other, fearing they might lose a ship. I told you in my last about the Japs attacking Wei-Hai-Wei. Not a shot from the ships touched the shore, and not one from the shore touched the ships, yet the viceroy made a present of two thousand taels to the commandant of the forts for the injury he had done to the Japanese fleet. Such is the reward of valor. Another yarn we heard was that the petty officers of the Chinese flagship went in a body and asked the admiral to go out and fight. At Wei-Hai-Wei as we passed last Monday there were nine men-of-war at anchor inside the harbor, and at Chemulpo there was one Japanese cruiser outside cruising about, while inside the harbor were two Japanese gunboats."

SHE NEVER SPEAKS.

A Lover's Revenge on the Girl He Afterwards Married.

A well known figure in the streets of this place is that of a raw-boned old horse drawing a cart in which is seated a man and woman of strange, and even romantic history, in spite of their shabby unpicturesqueness to-day. The are both of them over 50 years old, and have been in this country now for nearly 30 years. Their fellow-countrymen, who knew them in Germany, say that at the time of the Franco-Prussian war the man was a young lawyer of considerable talent, was conscripted and obliged to serve in the German army, although he was just about to be married.

He returned home after the war to hear that his bancee was on the eve of marriage with a former lover, and, without pausing to enquire into the truth of the report, made his way at once to the girl's home and found his rival with her. The man, whose guilty conscience did not exonerate him of an attempt to win the girl's favor, broke and ran at the sight of the infuriated lover, leaving the girl to face him alone.

She was so frightened that she could only stammer out excuses, and, maddened at this seeming confusion of treachery, the soldier rushed at the girl, and, seizing his sword, forced open her mouth, and saying that he would cut out the tongue that betrayed and lied to him, did so, and flinging the dissevered tongue at her feet, went home to await the consequences of his deed. The girl fainted, and her parents, who had been out, coming in and finding her thus, cried out that she was dead. This brought the police and a doctor. The former, being told the name of the culprit by the rival, went to take him in custody, while the doctor brought the maimed girl to and, learning what the matter was, tried to stop the flow of blood. This was almost a work of dispair, but finally her strength and the physician's skill prevailed.

When the poor creature learned that her lover had been arrested, and that they wished her to testify against him, she not only refused to do the first, but went to the police of the city in person and offered to take an oath that her lover had not committed the crime. He had already, however, admitted it, and his trial took place.

But the faithful sweetheart demanded to be taken to the judge who was to try the case, and submitted to him a statement that her lover had acted on a jealous impulse, and that he had been justified in believing her false. This, together with the fact that he had been cruelly torn away from his bride almost on the eve of marriage, and that he had served bravely all through the war, rising through courage alone from the rank of sergeant to that of lieutenant, served to mitigate the severity of his punishment, and he was sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

The colonel of his regiment, also a fellow citizen, knowing fully the circumstances of the case, and touched by the suffering of the faithful girl and hot-brained, though brave, lover, made still further efforts in his behalf and he was pardoned by the emperor after a month's imprisonment. They were married at once and came to this country, where they have a little farm, adding to their meagre income by selling milk and vegetables.

The woman for years allowed her neighbors to think that she was born a mute, though many suspected her silence as mere sulkiness, as she could evidently hear distinctly, but not long ago some immigrants from their native place saw and recognized them and told their sad history to the community.—New Braunsfels (Tex.) corr. Philadelphia Times.

Miscellany.

Five hundred pounds' worth of washing baths is the way a fashionable London journal speaks of Lord Rosebery's recent gift to the People's Palace. The premier believes in "tubbing" the people evidently, but it is one thing to lead a horse to water and another to make him drink. It is not many years since he gave the same institution a swimming bath, but that is another story, for chaps enjoy that kind of water very much where they wouldn't wash themselves for a farm.—Boston Herald.

"There is a prevailing superstition among hotel men," said one of them, "that to close the register brings bad luck to the house. You will find it so in every hotel in the country. And every clerk feels like jumping over the desk and thumping the man who carelessly closes the book. We never close a book until it is filled to the last page. I always place my hand on the book until the man who registers has left the desk. Whenever a man closes the book we have bad luck somewhere in the house."—Syracuse Post.

PLIGHT OF THE PARANOIAC.

The Victim Is In Continual Fear of Plots Against His Life.

The latest thing in neurotics is paranoia; it has always existed, but until a disease becomes popularized, so to speak, it cannot consistently lay claim to a technical name. The distinguishing symptoms of this malady is fear, says the Boston Traveler. The victim is very sure that someone is plotting against him. He knows it. For many months this fear may be upon him and his intimate friends see nothing in his manner. But he is alert, vigilant and on the lookout. Suddenly some day he sees his wife sprinkling white powder in his soup, and his life for the time is spared. Next day he slyly exchanges his cup of coffee for hers. She does not drink all her coffee—he knows why, but keeps the information to himself. Certain conspirators come to his house in the guise of rag peddlars, milkmen, etc.; he sees them and mentally takes note. He sees these men afterwards on the street, but they pretend not to see him; they turn their backs and walk away. He confronts them, they are astonished, and protest their innocence—"just as the guilty always do."

The ropes are being drawn tighter around the helpless victim. He sees his children are eyeing him—yes, even they have joined the enemy. A neighbor comes in and assumes a friendliness that he does not feel; it can be seen in his eye. Relentless hate is on the poor fellow's track—ruin, disaster, disgrace, death. Sleepless nights follow days of anxiety, and one of two things happens. The unhappy wretch in frenzy strikes down his wife or son or neighbor, who he imagines is about to wrong him, or he flees to a distant city to elude his pursuers. Arriving there he detects still other villains on his track; breathless, with bloodshot eyes and blanched face, the cold sweat standing in beads on his forehead, he rushes into a police station and demands protection. He gets it; for every police captain has seen more than one just such case.

It is a well-known fact that when a man is in a condition ripe for suggestion he accepts the thought of another. So paranoia is often known to have its beginning in the suggested hate of some one close. It is possible for a whole family to become infected with the same hallucination. An insane idea may run through a whole community, as the hallucination of witchcraft did in Salem in 1692, when nineteen innocent persons were hanged on testimony that was deemed unimpeachable. The witchcraft fear found root in a soil already full of apprehension. There are now some strong symptoms of social peranoia to be seen in certain parts of our country. If the antidote is not given it may become a scourge that will hold our fair name up as a byword and a hissing before the civilized world. The disease has found a favorable soil in many sections, especially in the rural districts of the west. The widespread financial depression has hit the farmer hard. The rustle of the mortgage has sung in his ears night and day, and visions of gigantic summonses and companies, backed up with writs of ejectment, have haunted his dreams. The result has been that a condition favorable to the suggestion of hate and fear has been prepared, and the suggestion has come.

Asbestos belongs to the class of materials that are year by year finding their way into new uses. It is already used in paints, roofing, and building materials as a non-conductor of heat, for steam packing, for fireproof cements, for tubing, for shovels, fork tines, cloth, rugs, cord, and sewing thread. Asbestos in the household is just beginning its career of usefulness. It is now made into hearth blowers, stove polishers, mats, flat-iron rests, and for baking paper. It will come in time, no doubt, to furnish fireproof handles, aprons, carpets, and a dozen other things.—New York Times.

As Well as Ever

After Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cured of a Serious Disease.

"I was suffering from what is known as Bright's disease for five years, and for days at a time I have been unable to straighten myself up. I was in bed for three weeks; during that time I had leeches applied and derived no benefit. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla advertised in the papers I decided to try a bottle. I found

NEWS OF THE INTERIOR.

Mining and Farming News from the Inland Press.

Nakusp Ledge.

G. M. Spencer and J. Ehrmann rant have discovered the boss ledge of the season. It is some miles to the south of the town and easy of access from the lake. They assert that it is 100 feet wide and of unknown length. It is a quartz proposition and there are millions in it.

New Denver arrivals state the government has recently granted $10,000 for new roads in the Slocan—$7000 for the Cody Creek project, $2000 for a trail to the Idaho and $1000 for a similar improvement to the Mountain Chief property.

Peter Campbell, a native of Inverness shire, Scotland, was drowned at the Silver King mine on Saturday by stumbling into a shaft party filled with water.

Word has been received of the arrival at Revelstoke of the spikes required for the completion of the railway. The Kootenay is expected down to-day with a cargo.

Peter Genelle & Co. have the contract for supplying the lumber for Captain Moore's concentrator near Three Forks. The machinery for the works is on the way from Chicago.

Denver, Col., capitalists are negotiating for the purchase of the North Star silver mine near Fort Steele, East Kootenay, from its present owners, C. P. R. officials. The upshot price is in excess of $50,000.

The Fern and Eureka properties, on Hall Creek, have been disposed of to C. N. Park, by a company headed by F. Fletcher. The purchase price is $35,000, $1000 to be paid by January 1st next and the remainder by Jan. 1st, 1895.

C. J. Taylor, one of the pioneers of the Slocan and Lardo countries, was in town last week for a day or two. He was on his way to the coast, thence to the big gold fields of Coolgardie, Australia.

Kamloops Sentinel.

Coutlee, Sept. 21.—An intermittent rainy season seems to have now set in. The first frosts have appeared and laid low tender garden growth in the valley, yet on the benches, where the best garden situations always lie, no damage from frost is shown.

What a lot of good land there is here untouched by the plough and of no present use, all for want of means of irrigation! It seems as though the twenty odd years of settlement have not yet solved the difficulty. The truth appears to be this, the difficulty, though not insurmountable, is too much for the not overrich landowner. There is plenty of water stored up in lakes not far distant, but only capital can make it reach the land. Is it absurd to hope that some day, not far distant, the public works department may be induced to invest some funds in carrying out such an object. An outlay of money such as this would be thought by many—even by those living at a distance from here—to be more productive to the country at large than some others of recent date that might be named.

Granite Creek, so often reported dead, is still attracting fresh capital and men, and as great a quantity of supplies this year as any of the past few years. In the Similkameen a new store has been opened by a Mr. McDougall, and another family have gone in for settlement. The dwellers in this valley are unfortunate in being still confined to the pack saddle for transportation of goods. There is, however, an easy and short route, through which a wagon road might connect their country with this, and that not longer than a half day's ride.

Kaslo Times.

George W. Hughes has received from the government $3000 to assist in building a wagon road from the Idaho basin to Three Forks, and $1200 to build a trail from the Mountain Chief to the same point, along the line of A. E. Hodgins' survey for a wagon road.

The Ainsworth record office has been removed to Kaslo. The flitting took place on Tuesday last. John Keen has been appointed recorder in place of T. J. Lendrum. John is in better luck than most of the active government supporters during last election. He will make an efficient and courteous officer.

After many vexatious delays, extending over a period of nearly a year, the members of the Masonic fraternity at Kaslo having finally succeeded in securing a dispensation from the grand lodge, and have organized with the following officers: D. McGregor, W. M.; A. J. McMillan, S. W.; A. A. Mackenzie, J. W.; H. Byers, secretary, and J. F. McIntosh, treasurer. The lodge has twelve charter members.

The Shelby Smelting Company of San Francisco has decided to spend one million dollars on Slocan ores. Sampling works are to be erected.

ON MOUNT SINAI.

Life and Ways of Its Christian Colony.

The present condition of the convent on Mount Sinai is thus described by a recent writer in the Guardian:

"It is an impressive thing thus to come upon a Christian colony and a Christian church in the rocky heart of the Sinaitic peninsula; a colony which can trace its ancestry to the earliest days of Byzantine Christianity, a church which bears witness to the faith of Justinian and Theodora, of Cosmas and Damian, of Catherine of Alexandria, and Catherine of Russia. The convent itself, is an irregular mass of buildings, heavily fortressed; there were days when it had to defend itself against Moslem persecution and Bedouin marauders. The monks within, some twenty or thirty in number, are uncouth and unkempt to the last degree. Hardly a sign of the effects of the religious life can be seen in their faces, many of them repulsive enough. But no visitor can fail to remember with gratitude their kindly and unaffected welcome. Their feelings toward the English church are most friendly, and if an English priest is among the travelers he is taken within the screen and allowed to kneel before the altar and to take part in the celebration of the liturgy. The church is a fine basilica, richly but tastefully decorated and well cared for. Its chief artistic treasure is the superb mosaic work in the apse, of the seventh or eight century, representing the transfiguration, to which the church is dedicated. As a rule there are three services daily, announced with chiming of bells and beating of gong, at 4 and 6 a.m., and 2 in the afternoon (vespers). The eucharist is celebrated generally twice a week and on saints' days.

"Beyond attending the services, the monks do not seem to have much to do. Study, of course, they never dream of. There is a great deal of baking of bread and brewing of date wine always going on, as well as some lazy whitewashing; there are the olives and vines in the garden to be looked after; but for the most part the inmates live a life of serene and vacant idleness. Of the chief officers the prior seems to be a nonentity; the most prominent person [illegible] who undertakes the services and internal economy of the house. Next in importance comes the secretary, a young man in deacon's orders, with some pretensions to education, possessed of a good-natured heart and a minimum of bad French. The precious library is under his charge, though he knows nothing at all about it, and handles the MSS in a way that is harrowing to one's feelings. But things are better now than they were once. The books are housed in three rooms with glazed windows; they are labelled, numbered, and most of them catalogued. Their contents have not yet been completely explored; but the latest searches warrant the belief that the principal treasures have been exhausted, and that another codex Sinaiticus is not likely to be discovered in a waste paper basket."

BURIED SPOILS OF PIRATES.

Story of a Find Made on an Island Off the Virginia Coast.

Traditions of treasures buried by the pirates Kidd, Lafitte and Blackbeard gave a romantic interest to the Atlantic coast from Massachusetts to Georgia, says the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette. Thousands of men have searched for these buried chests of gold, but there is authentic record of only two "finds," one on the New England coast, the other in Virginia. The latter case is said to have furnished Poe with the foundation of his story of the "Gold Bug." The facts are briefly these: In the Atlantic ocean lying off the Virginia coast, there are two or three heavily wooded islands. One of these was the resort of Blackbeard, and was called by his name—Teach. A neighboring island belonged a century ago to wealthy woman on the mainland. It was a wilderness which never had been inhabited but by foxes, wild ducks and other game. A trusty old slave, Ben, was placed by her in a cabin on the beach to bring her occasionally game and fish. One day, while walking on the shore, Ben saw a yellow gleam in the sand. It came from a gold coin. He searched breathlessly along the beach and found a rusty iron box, one end of which had fallen out. Within was a heap of coins with crosses and silver crucifixes. The old man went to his cabin and brought an empty salt bag, which he filled with the coins. He then dragged a heap of brush over the chest to conceal it, set up a broken sapling to mark the place, and started for the mainland to give the treasure to his mistress.

Tradition says that Mrs. Hetty was a hard, suspicious woman, and that when the trusty old negro gave her the mass of coin her joy was equaled by her terror that he would rob her of the great treasure which he had left behind. A heavy storm raged for five days. It was impossible for her to make the voyage to the island in an open boat, and she would not trust Ben, nor even her brother or son, to go with her. At the end of a week the sea was calm enough for her to cross, but the sapling, the brush and the chest had disappeared. An unbroken stretch of sand covered the whole coast. Ben could not find the spot then nor ever after. His mistress, it is said, kept him at the search as long as he lived, but in vain. Some of the gunners who have visited the island have also searched for Mrs. Hetty's chest, but it has never been found. Nothing is certain but the fact that the bag of coins brought to her and that the touch of the gold and her suspicions and greed made her life wretched to the end. The poor fishermen on the coast understand the moral of her story. When any of their number grows avaricious they say that he has "rubbed his hands against Mrs. Hetty's iron chest."

—Ayer's Hair Vigor promotes the growth and improves the beauty of the hair. A preparation [illegible] the roots of the hair, cleanses the scalp, prevents the accumulation of dandruff, and restores to faded and gray hair its original color.

"We must part," he declared, with quivering lip. The wife stood silent with averted head. "It is impossible for us to live together," he insisted, as he fastened the only life preserver on board to his person. Then the vessel foundered.—Pick-Me-Up.

PLACATING THE CANNERS.

Yesterday's Colonist gave a long statement on the salmon question from Sir Charles H. Tupper and Mr. Wilmot, in which statement those gentlemen jointly and severally demonstrated their ignorance, their hostility to the canners and their general unfitness to have the power of regulating one of the great industries of this province. The minister in one place shows his incapacity by uttering this childish threat:

> Just now the press teems with abuse because I am endeavoring to enforce the regulations and the fisheries act, though neither have been seriously questioned in parliament. I can see in this, as well as in the timidity of some of my officers, such an evidence of sympathy with the fishermen and canners, and at the same time hostility to fishery laws, that unless I find signs of approval elsewhere in the province, it may be my duty to advise my colleagues that all efforts on the part of my officers have failed, and that under the circumstances the fishery officers [illegible] the hatchery closed.

Sir Charles will not be apt to find the "signs of approval" he longs for, and will therefore have the opportunity of carrying out his threat. He may be perfectly sure that if he does so he will not lower himself and his department one degree in the estimation of British Columbians. In another portion of his statement he seeks to dispose of the canners' request for a prolongation of the sockeye season this year by quoting something Judge Cornwall said in 1882 against doing away with the closed day each week. It is quite beyond the mental powers of any one but a Tupper to find any connection between the two things. Mr. Wilmot, not to be behind his chief, refers to the canners' request in this fashion:

> There were two periods named in these regulations when the sockeye salmon should be taken, namely, from July 1 to August 25, and from September 25 to October 31, each of the days inclusive. [illegible] by canners, and by information obtained [illegible] August the sockeye salmon run would be generally over, and after that date these salmon would not be fit to can; and for this reason the 25th August was fixed as the closing of the fishing for sockeyes, in order to conserve the fishing industry, and also to prevent any inferior qualities of Canadian canned salmon being put upon the home and foreign markets.

The year of 1893 was particularly noted for an immense catch of salmon in British Columbia rivers, being over fifty per cent. greater than any previous season in the history of the canning industry. The value of canned salmon put up in 1893 amounted to $2,916,990, when in 1892 it was $1,378,631, making the extraordinary increase in 1893 over 1892 of $1,538,359. The canners in the face of this asked for a further extension of the fishing season for 1893 beyond the time established by law. This extension, however, by the determination of the minister to uphold the regulations and to conserve the fishing industries of the province, was not conceded.

An annual demand for extending the fishing season beyond the time established by law has become stereotyped by the cannerymen and their agents, no matter whether the salmon run may be more than half as large again as the previous year—as it actually was in 1893—or even when the run is reported to be "enormous," as in 1894, as quoted by the leading commercial periodical of the Dominion, the Journal of Commerce, and by other reliable authorities also. This demand for extending the legal period in which salmon can be taken, namely, the 25th of August, may in a measure be accounted for this season from another statement made in the Journal of Commerce, that an increase of one shilling per case on prices had been offered by London houses for the Fraser catch of salmon in 1894.

This is so rich in itself that comment would be apt to spoil it, but we may be allowed to hope that the canners will find, in Mr. Wilmot's anger, some evidence of his great friendliness for them. The worthy Colonist makes a vigorous effort to patch up a peace between the canners and the department—the general election being dangerously near—but there may unfortunately be an impression created by such effusions as Mr. Wilmot's that the department does not want any peace.

The Events of the Day Among Amateurs and Professionals.

CRICKET.

ENGLISHMEN WIN.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—In the second international cricket game between the gentlemen of Philadelphia and Lord Hawke's Englishmen the Britishers were the first to bat. They accumulated 271 runs, beating their record in last week's match by 24 points. Patterson, of Philadelphia, in muffing an easy ball from Bathurst's bat, injured one of his fingers and had to retire. The second day's play was not of a character to encourage the small number of local enthusiasts who ventured out in the disagreeable weather. The home team showed to rather poor advantage against the superior skill of the Britons, and the wet condition of the grounds was an additional disadvantage for the local batsmen. The Philadelphians made 107 in their first innings and 46 in their second. Lord Hawke's team scored 271 runs in their first innings.

THE RING.

New York, Oct. 1.—The Olympic club of New Orleans, are endeavoring to arrange a 25-round contest between John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain. President Schell of the Olympic club had a long talk with Kilrain during the fistic carnival, and Jake expressed his willingness to again fight the ex-champion. Sullivan, who was playing in Washington last week, when asked if he would meet Kilrain in a limited bout, said nothing would give him greater pleasure than to have a bout with Jake. The Olympic club is willing to put up a $5000 purse for a go between this pair, and they think a fight between them would be a great drawing card.

LACROSSE.

BAYS ARE CHAMPIONS.

One of the cleanest games of lacrosse ever played in the province was the one witnessed at the Caledonia park on Saturday between the James Bays of Victoria and the Ninetieths of Vancouver. The Bays won by four goals to none, thus winning the championship and the gold medals presented by the Victoria lacrosse club. On paper the match looks a great deal more one-sided than it really was, the Bays defence on several occasions being called upon to do some hard work, which they did in a manner which would have done credit to the seniors. The passing and checking were both brilliant and the teams being in good condition there was no lagging. The Bays have developed into a very strong team, and are good stick handlers. There are several of them who will be able to play with the seniors next season.

PRACTICE AT VANCOUVER.

The senior team had a good practice at Vancouver on Saturday. The Terminal City team was out of practice and several of the best men were not playing. Victoria won by six to one, the first four goals being scored in about twenty minutes, with no time between games.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Hunt Club held their first run of the season on Saturday.

The Victoria Rugby club practised on Saturday at the drill.

—The coal ship Louis Walsh, from San Francisco to Nanaimo, had to put back to the former port on Saturday, having lost some of her rigging.

—The only and celebrated Oofty Goofty is in the city again. He arrived on the City of Kingston from the Sound last night and will spend some days here.

—The contract for the construction of the Koksilah-Jordan river trail has been awarded by the lands and works department to George Weeks of Jordan Meadows.

—The ship Occidental, Captain Morse, arrived this morning from Vesuvius bay. She is on her way to Santa Rosalie with a cargo of mining props. Captain Morse is confined to his cabin, suffering from the effects of an accident with which he met several months ago.

—On Saturday, at 71 View street, the residence of the bride, A. J. Bertram and Mrs. Susan Bray were united in marriage by Rev. Thomas Baldwin. The bride was attended by Miss E. Brown and Mrs. Wey, and the groom by W. R. Buckmaster.

—The steamer Umatilla sailed for San Francisco last evening. The cabin passengers from Victoria were: J. Phair, E. Stanger, J. J. Kate and wife, F. Sones and daughter, Miss D. Schl, Miss A. Eyons, J. J. Grant, wife and children, Miss R. Page and Robert Francis.

—The Canadian Pacific has given notice to shippers through their Puget Sound agencies that as the entire tonnage of the steamer Empress of India, which sails for Yokohama, Shanghai and Hong Kong on October 15, has already been secured, no further freight need be contracted for that vessel.

—A meeting of the British Columbia board of trade will be held at 4:30 this afternoon to make arrangements for the reception of the citizens of Tacoma who are coming over on Tuesday evening to spend Wednesday at the fair. Mayor Teague and Dr. G. L. Milne, president of the agricultural association, will be present.

—E. B. Pond, ex-mayor of San Francisco and a prominent Democrat of the Golden State, is at the Driard, accompanied by Mrs. Pond. Mr. Pond is a wholesale liquor merchant, and has large interests all over the coast. His name was mentioned for governor during the recent Democratic state convention. At one time before the convention he was apparently a formidable opponent of J. H. Budd, who was nominated.

—The bar of the province is to be well represented at the Kamloops assizes. A. G. Smith, D. A. G., D. M. Eberts, Q. C., A. N. Richards, Q. C., A. L. Belyea, Ernest V. Bodwell and Gordon Hunter left yesterday morning on the Charmer. Charles Wilson and L. G. McPhillips, Q. C., of Vancouver, and A. J. McColl of New Westminster are also to be present. Besides the assize cases a number of civil suits are to be heard. Mr. Justice Walkem will preside, and in connection with the criminal business Supt. F. S. Hussey will also be present.

—As a result of the reduction in duty, the people of Puget Sound are now being supplied with a superior quality of Vancouver Island coal at a lower price than they have been paying for the inferior Puget Sound coal. As coal can be mined as cheaply on the Sound as in British Columbia, and as the mine owners on both sides will see that they make a fair profit, no one will suffer, while the general public will be benefited. Wellington coal is to be retailed in Seattle at $6 a ton, or $1 less than Victorians have to pay for it.

—The ship Windsor Park left for Tacoma to-day in tow of the American tug Tacoma. She is to load wheat for the United Kingdom.

—The passengers from Vancouver on the steamer Charmer last evening were treated to a splendid concert, the programme being supplied by the members of the Hanley-Osbourne company and other passengers.

—Prof. W. Edgar Buck is preparing a costume concert to be called "The Meeting of Nations." It will include some of the popular national songs and numbers from "Il Trovatore" and "The Bohemian Girl." It is to be given for the benefit of the Orphans' Home.

—Captain Troutman, owner of the steamer Delta of Seattle, is in the city. He is going to put his boat on between Victoria and the islands, and is here making arrangemnts for wharf privileges and fixing up other business. The Delta will begin running in a few days.

—The Port Townsend Evening Call, a Democratic paper, published a story on Saturday to the effect that a cargo of Chinamen was landed near Tacoma on Wednesday, while Collector Saunders and most of his custom house officials were at the Yakima convention. The Call says the profits realized from this deal netted the smugglers $3000.

—The Salvation Army meetings yesterday were well attended and full of interest. Two special meetings are announced for this week's campaign. On Tuesday evening there will be an "Exhibition Jubilee," and on Wednesday a "Musical Blizzard." Already great interest is being manifested in regard to the coming of General Booth and his proposed visit to Victoria. The dates are fixed for Jan. 2 and 3.

—The new Methodist church at Strawberry Vale was formally opened yesterday. Rev. Mr. Ashton of Victoria West occupied the pulpit in the morning and Rev. Solomon Cleaver in the afternoon. There were large congregations at both services. The new church was built from the proceeds of the union Sunday school picnic to Sidney on Dominion day. The lot was donated by Mr. Luscomb. Rev. Mr. Ashton will preside over the congregation.

The Lion Brand of Flour. Cheapest and best. Try it once; use it always.

—John Wilson, of the Albion Iron works, had a narrow escape from serious injury by a fall on the stairway of the Pacific club on Saturday evening. Half way up the stairs are a pair of swinging doors, and the landing is rather small. He missed his footing and tripped, and plunged headlong to the foot of the stairs. When found he was unconscious, and Dr. Hasell, who was called in, said he feared he was suffering from concussion of the brain. Mr. Wilson was removed to Jubilee hospital in the ambulance. At the hospital he revived, and, aside from a bad bruise, was all right. He was able to go home yesterday.

If Mr. Wiggins and other gentlemen who profess to be on terms of personal intimacy with the clerk of the weather will but use their influence with that all important functionary to secure a clear atmosphere for Victoria in the week just commenced, they will earn the gratitude of the people not only of this section, but of the multitudes who intend visiting the capital city during the worthcoming festivities; for nothing more than a cloudless sky is needed now to secure for Victoria such a week of carnival as has rarely been witnessed here. The executive of the assocition have done wonders; their policy of launching the exhibition this year has been based on the most liberal lines; the scope of their efforts has been broad and far-reaching, so that the province will be fully represented in its varied wealth of field, garden, forest, stream, mine, manufactory and store. Nothing has been left undone to win the confidence and co-operation of all who had or could produce any article for exhibition, and with a thoroughly successful result; the "average citizen," seeing his neighbor preparing for the show, is seized with a fit of competition, and decides to go in himself, thus creating a spirit of friendly rivalry that is productive of the general good. This is the spirit which the directorate of the association worked so hard to arouse, the results of which are amply apparent to the visitor at first sight of the grounds and buildings.

Yesterday in the vicinity of Fort street and contributory channels had the appearance of a very busy week day. Vans, wagons, trucks and drays, laden with a miscellaneous collection of goods, and tended by toilers, wended their way towards the fair grounds, where the burdens were unloaded and placed in the respective places allotted to them by the management. At the grounds themselves many busy hands were at work converting chaos into order. Boxes were being unpacked and their contents strewn around in confusion at the various stalls, only to be picked up shortly and arranged in tempting regularity and order. The most delicate wares lay mixed with heavy, cumbersome articles one minute, only to stand out in pleasant contrast to each other the next, when placed in the desired position. Thus the work of preparation went on until a late hour last night, when the hammers, saws and other tools which had been busy all day were laid aside till daybreak this morning, only to be resumed and plied till the last nail fastening board or the final tack holding the decorative festooning is driven to-night or early to-morrow. The probability is that many of the exhibitors will find it necessary to work all night to-night in order to be ready for the opening to-morrow. In the midst of all this bustle and disorder in the main building, however, one fact was apparent, and that is the varied pursuits followed in a community of men. There lay strewn around the products of a dozen different callings in as many yards square.

The first fact brought strongly home to the visitor is the inaccuracy of the statement made by Rev. Dr. Grant, who asserted that British Columbia is a sea of mountains. There is a silent denial of that assertion placed by Mr. Rithet immediately inside the main entrance in the shape of an arch composed of bags of the well known Enderby flour. This is not the only refutation of a libel on the banner province, for the Victoria Roller mills have a tastefully arranged exhibit a little to the left, and if the visitor will proceed to the end of the hall he will find in the right hand corner a spot suggesting, de facto, peace and plenty. It is a quaint little retreat built of bags of flour from the National Mills (Brackman & Ker), relieved here and there with the heads of the virgin wheat. Inside are many little evidences of a tasteful mind, the chief being a temptingly comfortable looking arm chair made of the same material as the walls. It looks very nice, but the weary traveller who reclines there with a dark suit will have his clothes dyed a nice white at small cost. Mr. Cohen salutes the public with his Primrose cigars, and on the right his partner occupies a quarter side of the hall with an immense exhibit of the products of his factory, from large barrels of vinegar through all the grades of pickles, jams, fruits, and all the other inventions intended to tempt the over indulgent appetite or render more palatable the hungry man's meal. Over this combination of sweets and sours a young lady presides to explain to the public the respective qualities of the numerous jars, bottles, flasks and barrels. If the people of Victoria are not clean it is not Mr. Pendray's fault, for he has soap enough out there, it would seem, to wash the Chinese army and navy, and then have a little to spare for the Japs. There is on exhibition soap of different hues; there are pillars and blocks of soap; cakes and bars, and the whole together are as multicolored as the rainbow. It is set out in plain, uncompromising bars, so that there is no mistaking the fact that it is soap, whole soap, and nothing but soap; and it is arranged in fancy boxes, so that but for its surroundings it might be taken for chocolate creams or bon-bons. Retiring modestly in the corner on the left hand side of the entrance, but looking very refreshing, is the exhibit of the Victoria Phoenix brewery. It is not a large display, but that does not detract in any way from the good name which that well known institution has earned for itself. A short distance from the door also is the collection shown by the Pioneer Coffee and Spice mills of Victoria, the numerous neatly labelled bottles and tins not only presenting a very attractive appearance, but emitting a delicious odor by their combined flavors. Across the passage to the right from this, immediately beyond a mountain of Jersey brand condensed milk, is Mr. Henry Clay's cake counter, at which there will be cast many longing eyes before the fair is over. In the alcove, a short distance off, Messrs. Okell & Morris have established a branch of their fruit preserving factory. Just, now, however, the gentleman who presides there will be engaged in turning out a seemingly limitless quantity of candy of every conceivable shape and color, there being a furnace, a seething cauldron,' and every conceivable paraphernalia necessary for manufacturing endless toothaches and making rich dentists. The display of preserved fruit, etc., is highly creditable to this goahead institution, which has made gigantic strides within the last couple of years. Pennock & Lowe have a pretty stand, in charge of a young lady, whose special mission is to supply the public with dainty little souvenirs of the fair and of Victoria. A mystic sign, 'buy the child a pusher," will be properly explained at this counter. The proprietors of Cheapside and Mr. W. H. Perry, the hardware man, are near neighbors, and both are successful in proving that if we have coal and wood in abundance for fuel there is no lack in the variety of stoves to burn them in. Leaving this region of what appears to be dormant fire, it is cooling to come in sight of Phillips' soda and other aerated water exhibits. There is to be found in the collection all the usual temperance drinks, from the innocent looking and severely plain ginger ale bottles up to the fancy tinselled and capsuled cider bottles, rivalling in appearance the most expensive brands of champagne. It is the proprietor's intention on Children's day to have a fountain running all day, and to present the youngsters with a refreshing drink of their own choice from the stock on exhibition. Here are displayed the medals and diplomas won by this firm at the Chicago fair. Messrs. Dunsmuir are also making a display of the hydrox system, which will be rather interesting. A special feature of interest is a miniature house, perfect in every respect, shown by the Taylor Mill company. It is constructed altogether from lumber manufactured by that company, and would make a remarkably handsome present as a doll house on a large and elaborate scale. Immediately adjoining this novelty is a representation, in active operation, of Mr. Phillips' sanitary grate, with the apparatus so arranged that its working is at once visible and almost self-explanatory. The contrivance, which, like most clever inventions, is relly very simple after all, is becoming very popular, a number of private residences in Victoria having already adopted it. It is founded on a simple scientific basis, and cannot help, from its very construction, performing all that is claimed for it. Mr. Phillips has had erected a grate with the several registers plainly visible, which conveys a clearer impression than anything else of the working and the effect of the invention. This is the first opportunity he has had of publicly exhibiting it, although a full description of it was published in the Times when the grate was first brought out. Weiler Bros. are on hand this year with a handsome dining room and drawing room exhibit, the furnishings being selected from the best of their splendidly equipped establishment. Rich, heavy toned carpets and rugs, contrasting well with the massive furniture of the dining room, are in strong relief of the pleasanter, lighter and cheerier furnishings of the bright little drawing room.

The first floor is, as in former years, mainly devoted to the lighter articles, such as pictures, needle and fancy work, stationery goods and similar lines. In the art department there is a goodly representation of local talent, but the collection is not yet complete. The ladies have excelled themselves this year in fancy work, of which more detailed mention will be made when the exhibits are placed in order. There are some wonders evolved from woman's fertile brain and placed in silks, satins and cottons, while the crochet and knitting work displays marvellous ingenuity, patience and perseverance. Messrs. Lindley & Foster, taxidermists, have a splendid collection of heads, birds and animals. The deer family are well represented, but unfortunately the full beauty and effect are over the window. With a darker background, which is a white sheeting placed over the window. Wit ha darker background a grand effect would have been obtained, but, as it is, this section of the building is an admirable object lesson, very capably set out, of the riches of British Columbia's woods in animal and bird life. In addition to a very nice collection of fancy goods shown by Messrs. Hibben & Co., there is also a pretty display of hand painted Christmas and New Year's cards, not by any means the least beautiful of which are some from the hand of Mrs. Cave. The most interesting article of this exhibit, and of the building, for that matter, is the now famous gun which took two men-of-war to seize on the schooner Favorite. This fearful weapon, which but for the keen forethought of the U. S. S. Mohican and H. M. S. Pheasant, might have rendered null and void all the learned arguments of the international sealing arbitration, now rests peacefully in the British Columbia agricultural building, [illegible] interest of many thousands of people for the next few days. The third and top floor is devoted to specimens of printing and lithograph work, in the latter branch the Victoria Lithograph company making a very creditable display. Among the work turned out by this company is a Scaife's Synoptical Chart of English His-

The public analyst states that "filtration and aeration" would make Victoria water safe for drinking and domestic use. Proof of the inferiority of Esquimalt water. Chemical analysis by H. Carmichael, the public analyst:—Esquimalt water from Thetis lake, free ammonia, 0.02132; albuminoid ammonia, 1.158. Chemical analysis by the McGill university, Montreal: Victoria water, from the dam, free ammonia, 0.178; albuminoid ammonia, 0.219. The above analysis shows that Esquimalt water contains five and a half times more deleterious matter (albuminoid ammonia) than Elk lake water. ....Telephone 168.

The French Humorist Among Our Antipodean Cousins.

M. Paul Blouet, the genial humorist critic, who makes it his special business to tell us how "John Bull and His Island" strike our foreign visitors, has contributed to the Revue de Paris that portion of his forthcoming book, "John Bull and Co., dealing with the Australian colonies.

Max O'Rell, during his late lecturing tour round the world, does not seem to have lost his time; and his criticisms, both kindly and severe, are those of a shrewd observer anxious to discover the secret of successful colonization; and although he does not say so in as many words, he evidently considers Australia superior in many things to the United States.

He gives an attractive picutre of the colonial cities, with their fine public buildings, large parks and neat rows of pleasant homes, where you might easily imagine yourself, he says, in some forgotten corner of far away England; the more so—and of this the French writer can scarcely be said to approve—that our Australian cousins have remained faithful to the roast beef, boiled potatoes and plum puddings of the mother country; for Max O'Rell hoped to find on an Australian bill of fare stewed kangaroo, roast cockatoos and boiled opossum. He laments the Australian abuse of tea, and points out that, did they but know it, the colony might become as great a wine drinking country as France or Italy. Like most of those who visit Australia, M. Blouet laments the class of immigrant who finds his way there, and hints that the colony migh have a very different future if a thousand sober, hard working French peasants could be suddenly planted therein. The workman, according to Max O'Rell, is the real sovereign and master of Australia, but of his sovereign the French traveller gives but a poor account. "The Autstralian workman is an idler, a drunkard, whose life is spent in perpetual holiday, and who cares nothing about the advancement of his country. He will leave the best paid work to attend a race a hundred miles from home. He is without technical knowledge and becomes turn and turn about a carpenter, a locksmith, a mason, a gardener, a waggoner, a shearer and even a schoolmaster." Again, "If Australia were peopled with intelligent and laborious tillers of the soil, she might become in time the granary of the world;" and he pays a just tribute to the German, Swedish and Chinese settlers.

Max O'Rell considers that the Australian has the gayest and brightest nature of any of the British colonists, but he evidently believes that the whole Australian population is given over to the demon of gambling, and remarks that there is no corner of the bush where a keen and practical interest is not taken in the result of that Australian Derby, the Melbourne Cup.

The author of "John Bull and His Island" compares Australian amusements very favorably with those of the Old World, and gives en passant a well merited reproach to those Parisian places of amusement where almost every step is made the excuse for a tip or extortionate fee. In the same article M. Blouet touches on several of the problems affecting the empire, and alludes to the great part played by Mr. Cecil Rhodes in South Africa. These few pages discover their author in a somewhat new light—that of a thoughtful student of contemporary history and a singularly impartial observer.

MONSTER OF THE DEEP.

A Tall "Fish Story" From a South Sea Vessel Captain.

When the Sydney owned bark Loongana anchored in Woolloomooloo bay from the Gilbert islands it was not supposed that anything more unusual had occurred than the native troubles that beset nearly every vessel trading to the outlying islands of the Pacific, says the Samoan Herald. On entering the ship's cabin, however, among the first things noticed was an extraordinary looking sketch in the hands of the captain. A very few inquiries were needed to obtain an account of one of the most remarkable experiences at sea reported for years.

"It was when we were near Santa Cruz islands," said the captain, "and were coming along with a light breeze, the ship doing her three or four knots, that this hideous looking monster of the deep (pointing to the sketch) was seen. Astern of the Loongana. The man at the wheel sang out, 'Here's a whale coming along,' and later, 'No, it's not a whale; what is it?'

"The whole of the crew then ran aft, and some of them said that they thought the end of the world was upon them. They had seen whales by the score, sharks in all parts of the ocean, and had read of sea serpents, but the like of this they had never heard of. Presently the monstrosity ranged along side of the Loongana. Standing on the deck of the bark and looking over the bulwarks the distance to the water was about ten feet, so that an excellent view was possible.

It was then realized that when the head of the unnatural object was abreast of the port forechains its other extremity came well abaft the ship's quarter. The crew looked on in horror, while the captain went below for his Martini-Henry rifle. As the ship and fish kept together side by side for nearly an hour opportunity was taken to sketch the phenomenon, and it was this sketch Captain Runcie exhibited yesterday to his visitors on board the Loongana. The length of this aquatic curiosity was not so remarkable as its appearance. Its dimensions were 30 feet long, 11 feet across the back and perhaps 5 feet in depth. The tail was the same as a shark's, and it had a small fin on the back about ten feet from the tail. There were two small side "wings," or "flappers," but the head was neither that of a whale nor a shovel nosed shark. Indeed, there seemed to be no head, as heads go amongst fish, but simply jaws, which kept opening and closing slowly the whole time the uncanny visitor stayed by the ship. "It had a coat of mail on," said the chief officer, when describing how the bullets from Captain Runcie's rifle simply glanced off, leaving just a dint and a graze.

"There was no blood about, though shot on shot from fore and aft were fired upon the fish. Nor was the fish in the slightest degree disturbed, still ploughing along the surface, touching the bark's side, and within reach with a boat hook. As a last attempt to divert its attention elsewhere shots were fired into the expansive and enormous jaws. One of the shots seemed to strike the lips, and, giving a crash with its tail that sent the spray over the ship's poop, the fish disappeared. The width across the jaws was seven feet, but it appeared to have neither eyes nor teeth.

The color was a muddy gray, and its back was covered with white spots. There was no protruding nose, as in a shark or a whale, no tapering at all towards the head. An idea of its shape has been suggested as that of one of the bow and stern chasers—the big, heavy guns on the flagship Orlando, only of much greater length, the muzzle of the gun being the tail and the ponderous breech the head of the fish."

HERA'S TEMPLE IN ARGOLIS.

What the American School at Athens is Bringing to Light.

Since 1892, when the hope of obtaining Delphi as the site for its explorations had to be laid aside, the American School at Athens has been busied excavating the Argive "Heraeon," the great temple of Hera (Juno), on the mountain side, midway between Argos and Mycenae, one of the most famous sanctuaries of ancient Greece. In 423 B. C. the old temple was burned down and a new and more splendid structure erected near the former site, the architect being Eupolemos, of Argos. For it Polyzleitus, of Sicyon, the great rival of Phidias, made the famous statue of Hera, of gold and ivory, which was kept in the inner shrine, and there is reason to believe that he designed and supervised the sculptural adornment of the rest of the temple. As we have now no specimens of his work, the importance of the discoveries that are being made is apparent.

Under the direction of Dr. Charles Waldstein the sites of both temples have been laid bare. Where the old temple stood a pavement fifty yards long by thirty-eight wide was found, of large, irregular slabs of stone, covering the greater part of the terrace and supported by Cyclopean retaining walls. Under it were many rude fragments of pottery belonging to a very early period, bronzes, rudely engraved stones, glass and bone beads, and a curious bronze goat. Many of the metal objects were partly melted, and, with numerous fragments of charred wood and stone split by the heat, confirm the story of the fire.

Far more important, however, was the excavation of the later temple. The circuit of the entire substructure has been revealed, and from it the architecture of the building is known, as the superstructure was demolished during the middle ages. It was a Doric temple, with twelve columns at the sides and six at either end. The proportions are 131 feet by 66.7, a lesser ratio of length to width than in the Parthenon. The columns were of Poros stone with a fluting of twenty channels. The sculptures in the metopes and pediments were of Parian marble, and represented the birth of Zeus, the battle with the Giants, the expedition against Troy and the capture of that city. A number of structures around the temple were also discovered; some of remote antiquity may have served as dwellings for the priestesses. At either end of the temple are large rectangular edifices whose roofs were supported by columns, and a portico having a range of at least nineteen pillars was probably filled with statues. Outside the sacred edifice is another portico and a tunnel cut into the live rock, which has been followed for nearly forty yards.

The works of art brought to light almost equal in importance the discoveries of Schliemann. Terra cotta idols, plaques and images of animals, bronze statuettes, rings and pins, beads, scarabs and seals of amber, glass or porcelain, with many other objects; some belonging to the archaic period and others to the remotest antiquity, have been found by hundreds. There is much pottery and a great number of terra cotta figurines, for the most part representing women. The fragments of sculpture belonging to the best period of Greek art are even more interesting and important. They include the beautiful head of "Hera," three torsos of nude warriors, a head with a Phyrgian cap, another with a helmet, two lions' heads and the torso of a draped female figure. Among the most recent finds are the beautiful head of a young warrior, the workmanship on which has all the characteristics of the art of Polykleitus, as described to us by the ancients, and a curious figure wrapped in a sheepskin chiton and a mantle and holding a dove in its left hand.

Two hundred and fifty workmen, mostly peasants from the neighboring villages, are employed in the excavations under the direction of Dr. Waldstein and Professor Richardson, the director of the American School of Archaeology, assisted by Messrs. Norton, Hoppin, Washington and Alden, students in the school.

WROTE FAMOUS SONGS.

Memorial to the Author of "Marching Through Georgia."

Friends of Henry C. Work, the author of "Marching Through Georgia," recently at a New York dinner party not long ago, chanced to drift into a discussion of popular songs, the famous "Marching Through Georgia" eliciting most attention.

"I wonder who wrote that song," said one of the participants in the festivities.

"It was written by a Hartford printer named Henry C. Work," answered a lady at the table, who had been listening to the discussion. At that meeting the idea of erecting a memorial in honor of the Union sogmaker was suggested, and, according to the New York Times, there is every prospect of its being carried out by the New York and Hartford friends of the balladist, who died at Hartford, Con., ten years ago, and is buried in one of the old cemeteries of the city. The memorial is to be a granite pedestal with bas-reliefs in bronze, representing war scenes, such as Work's songs suggest. There will also be a bust of the author of the famous songs. The memorial will be erected on the City Park, south of the state capitol, and will occupy one of the most picturesque spots in Hartford.

Henry C. Work, the author of "Marching Thro' Georgia," "Wake Nicodemus," "Grandfather's Clock" and a score of songs popular thirty years ago, was born in the city of Middlesex, October 1, 1832, but was educated and made his home at Hartford through life. He learned the printer's trade at Hartford and worked at the case before he began his song-writing, not far from the outbreak of the civil war. One of his temperance songs, "Father, dear Father, Come Home"—was composed and published just before the war and was sung everywhere by the friends of cold water. "They've Grafted Him Into the Army" was one of his humorous songs that took like wildfire during the conscription period of the war. "Grandfather's Clock" was universally sung in the north for many years. But the words and music gaining the firmest hold were "Marching Thro' Georgia," and the singer's memory will be longest kept in the public mind by this famous ballad. Work composed the words and music of his songs. He made a fortune by his songs and wasted it in fruit raising at Vineland, N. J. Finally the plates of his balladswere destroyed in the Chicago fire in 1871. Mr. Work died June 8, 1884. Every Memorial Day his grave is decorated with flags and flowers by the friends of the Grand Army.

Miscellany.

There has died at his residence, Carniney, near Ballymena, Ireland, one who was reckoned to be the most diminutive man in Ulster. His name was David Yaston, and his stature did not reach beyond the height of three feet. At the time of his death, which occurred on July 26, he had attained the age of about 50 years. He was a married man and leaves a widow and several of years past he was well known througout Ballymena and the district as an evangelistic preacher and carried on the grocery business.

The people quickly recognize merit, and this is the reason the sales of Hood's Sarsaparilla are continually increasing. Hood's is "on top."

NOTICE OF ASSIGNMENT.

Pursuant to the Creditors' Trust Deeds Act and amending Acts, notice is hereby given that by indenture dated and executed on the 28th day of September, 1894, by George L. The Best Medicine.

J. O. WILSON, Contractor and Builder, Sulphur Springs, Texas, thus speaks of Ayer's Pills:

"Ayer's Pills are the best medicine I ever tried; and, in my judgment, no better general remedy could be devised. I have used them in my family and recommended them to my friends and employes for more than twenty years. To my certain knowledge, many cases of the following complaints have been completely and by the use of Ayer's Pills alone: Third day chills, dumb ague, bilious fever, sick headache, rheumatism, flux, dyspepsia, constipation, and hard colds. I know that a moderate use of Ayer's Pills, continued for a few days or weeks, as the nature of the complaint required, would be found an absolute cure for the disorders I have named above."

"I have been selling medicine for eight years, and I can safely say that Ayer's Pills give better satisfaction than any other Pill I ever sold."—J. J. Perry, Spottsylvania C. H., Va.

AN OLD SEVENTY-FOUR.

I am nothing now but a shattered old hulk,
With not even a sail or mast,
Laid up in the dock to rot and to sulk,
And to brag of the days that are past.
There is only one gun, an old crecked one,
That is left me here on my deck,
From which hot shot in the days that are not
I fired from this shattered old wreck
Despoiled and bereft, and with nothing left,
I am kept here, who knows why?
Save to tell the old tales till my memory fails
Of the glorious days gone by—
Of the battles I fought, of the din of war,
Of the times of peace, the voyages far
Into many a sea and clime
That I made in the good old well-rigged time,
When life was without a care
And I in my strength and prime.
Now, far away to the tropic isles,
Where the love birds of Paradise flash through the air,
And the year's long summer sleeps linger-there,
And the deep blue heaven smiles—
Now, to the north, where the icebergs high
Topple all flashing against the sky,
Or into the seas at their bases lashing,
Spilting, fall with a sudden crashing,
And the white gulls startled fly.

* * * *

You may laugh if you choose, and scorn and abuse
Those good old sailing days—
You may boast of your steam and your wheels and your screws,
And all your new-fangled ways;
But for beauty and grace you must take second place,
However your use you praise.
Ah, yes! for a braver and gallanter sight
On the ocean you never will find
Than an old three-master, its canvas white
All rounded out to the wind—
Not hammering, panting along the sea
With a ceaseless splashing and noise,
But almost flying, bending, careening,
Now up erect, now sideways leaning,
With an ever-shifting poise.
Ah, that was sailing! ah, that was living!
How we went in those days! how we went!
The winds from heaven their impulse giving,
And we joying in what they sent!
How we played with the storm and laughed with the tempest,
As under their pressure we bent,
The wild seas leaping, and rushing, and sweeping
Over our one deck—[illegible]
[illegible] high up, and cleaving
The dark billows before it heaving,
As over them bravely it rides:
Or downward stooping and into them swooping
As greenly they yawned beneath,
Into their black caverns scrooping,
With a foam-bone in its teeth—
While above at the masthead flying free,
And playing with the wind,
Streamed the good old flag, and after us sweeping
Came the following gulls, their orbed wings dipping
In the foam-fringed edge of the billows upleaping
In the rustling wake behind.

—N. W. Story, in Blackwood's Magazine.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

COWICHAN'S EXHIBITION.

Prizes Keenly Contested for in Every Department of the Fall Show.

Marked Improvement in the Exhibits of Live Stock and Produce.

One of the smaller agricultural exhibitions, but by no means the least in point of interest and quality of exhibits, was the one held at Duncan's Station on Saturday by the Cowichan and Salt Spring Agricultural Association. The uncertainty of the weather did not prevent a large number of Victorians and residents of the near by districts from attending. The exhibit of live stock was very creditable, being a big improvement on those shown in former years. Many of the prize winners will be heard of at the Victoria exhibition. The fruit, flowers, vegetables and dairy produce were also very good and occupied most of the available space in the main hall. The ladies took a prominent part making an excellent show of fancy work, taking many of the prizes for the dairy and other produce.

During the afternoon there were a number of sporting events which were keenly contested.

The prize list follows:

Nothing Strange.

Intelligent people, who realize the important part the blood holds in keeping the body in a normal condition, find nothing strange in the number of diseases Hood's Sarsaparilla is able to cure. So many troubles result from impure blood, the best way to treat it is through the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla vitalizes the blood.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.

tory, an immense piece of lithography of great intricacy in production, but of considerable lucidity to the reader.

This chart, which has been adopted by the government for public school use, is drawn to scale on the lines of a geographical map, and comprises a period of 828 years from the conquest of England by William of Normandy to the present date. It gives in clear form the genealogy of kings and queens, as also of the different pretenders to the English throne at various times. It shows the periods during which England has been at war, the increase in the national debt, in population and other important data. The names of men of prominence, with the dates of their birth and death, are arranged in such a manner as to show the exact position they occupy in history, while important events are printed in large type so as to specially catch the eye, in short, the object of the chart is to demonstrate the relative position of events with a view to assisting the historical student, and that object is most successfully attained. All that is necessary for its final issue is the completion of certain formalities respecting the copyright, which will no doubt be effected in time to permit of its being published by the end of the year. Mr. Scaife spent more than three years in compiling this chart, but he is more than repaid by the splendid results of his long and arduous work. The execution of the work from a typographical and lithographical point of view would reflect credit on any establishment; it is clear, bold and accurate, and in every way shows evidence of the most skilled workmanship.

The Province Printing company will have two job presses running continuously throughout the week, giving the public a good insight into the art of printing and press work. It will be under the superintendence of Mr. Chapman, foreman of the Province office.

In this department also a space is devoted to maps made by school children, and although some of the countries depicted might not recognize themselves at first glance, yet the collection on the whole is highly meritorious.

THE OUT DOOR DEPARTMENTS.

The erection of the machinery hall as a separate building was a happy thought, as it not only leaves more room in the main building (already small enough), but it enables visitors to get a better idea of this class of heavy exhibits. Already it is evident that this department must be enlarged before another year, as it can scarcely hold the full complement of exhibits this year.

Stockmen are of the opinion that the present will eclipse any previous fair. There is a superior class of stock this year, particularly in horses, and the prospects are even better for next season. Dan Mitchell, the well known Australian horseman, is on the grounds with no less than eighteen pedigreed stock, and every animal of them looking a picture of healthfulness and good grooming. Mr. Sayward's Christmas, which has been in Dan's hands this season, never looked better. This pure bred stallion, always an example of equine beauty, this year has a coat resembling the finest satin. He has also in charge a number of blooded stock from Dr. Powell's stables, among them Elsie T., a standard bred three year old; a yearling colt by Hooker; four heavy draught horses, his beautiful saddle mare Beauty, and a superb pure bred stallion, Sir Peter. As this is rather an aristocratic animal, and is a new comer here, he calls for a little more than passing mention. He is a pure bay, without a blemish, faultless in conformation, and although of stylish action, there is no force lost in grand stand work. He is one of those animals which carry their breeding in their appearance.

Sir Peter, foaled in 1883, and bred by James R. Keene, the New York millionaire breeder, is by King Alphonso out of Janet, she by Lightning; second dam [illegible] by Bonnie Scotland; third dam sister of Ruric, by imported Sovereign; fourth dam Levity, by imported Trustee. He is also half brother to Foxhall, winner of the St. Leger, the Two Thousand Guineas and the Grand Prix, Paris, and carries in his veins family blood of Ladas, Salvator and other great kings of the track. He is also full brother of King Lee, who ran fourth in the Suburban handicap.

Elsie T. was brought to this province by Major C. T. Dupont, who purchased her from the well known Toronto horseman E. H. Gooderham. She is sired by the Wassar No. 7733, American Trotting register, out of a dam by Judge Durrell, who was a splendid performer, having a mark of 2.28, her second dam being also a good performer, having a mark well below the standard. The Wassar, Elsie T.'s sire, has just won the 2.25 trot at Simcoe, having trotted the last heat in the remarkably fast time of 2.20 1-2 on a rough regulation track.

Mr. J. S. Yates has a pretty two year old, Nancy, in the same capable hands, Nancy may do something surprising in her class one of these days.

The Telegraph Estate, with its characteristic enterprise, is well to the fore this year with a representative collection of pedigreed stock. The two standard bred stallions Midgard and Lollard are in beautiful trim; they are accompanied by a number of their progeny, all creditable to their sires, among them a Lollard five monther, which is already beginning to show its sire's paces. Among the horned stock from the Estate are the handsome roan bull Christmas Box, winner of the silver cup offered in the sweepstakes for all comers at Westminster last year; Royal Knight, four years old, and a prize winner; Moonlight, a beautiful white cow, also a prize winner; a herd of five cows, five heifers, three yearling bulls, two bull calves, two heifer calves and ten pure bred Leicester sheep.

George Byrnes has his Australian stallion, Doncaster and filly Miowera entered, and they will likely hold their own. Munro Muler has a couple of beautiful fillies on the list, and the pioneer stallion Ophir, which surprised the natives last year.

The stock from Saanich and the mainland are not all here yet, but the former are arriving in batches and will all be here by to-morrow.

R. P. Rithet will have a representation from the Broadmead farm.

The dining room is in capable hands this year, Mr. Henry Clay having the contract. He has a large staff of assistants, with every arrangement for seating and dining 150 persons at one time and a dining hall tastefully and comfortably appointed.

To-day was a busier one than any since preparations commenced, either for the officials or exhibitors. The indoor exhibits came pouring in from an early hour this morning, are going in now in large numbers and will be on the move till late this evening. Things have assumed definite shape, and the building has now something like fair appearance. A beautiful creation sprang into existence this morning under the hands of Mrs. F. C. Davidge, of F. C. Davidge & Co., and his assistants. It is the decoration of the band stand with Oriental goods, comprising the richest and most delicate fabrics in silks. The chief feature, however, is the display of numerous different panels of Japanese wall paper, made in imitation of the old fashioned Spanish carved leather. It is of course a genuine work of art and cannot fail to attract attention and admiration.

F. Norris is showing a collection of harness, trunks and leather ware, principal among the latter goods being several large hides from British Columbia animals, tanned and prepared in Victoria at Mr. Norris' factory from hemlock bark brought down from Valdez island by A. Sutherland & Co.

The establishment for feathered exhibits, rabbits, and so forth, is only beginning to be filed up, and several arrivals have to be noted on the stock list; among them being J. S. Bowker's handsome, rich sorrel driving mare Cricket, with a promising yearling colt at foot, by Christmas. The colt shows favorably to the mother, and has her main points of beauty. Mr. Bowker has also on view a pedigreed Jersey bull, which is worth quite a few dollars. Deans Brothers have a consignment of their stock in the shape of a couple of Holstein calves.

Heavy consignments have also been received fro ma number of green houses, both professional and amateur, more particular mention of which will be made later.

By to-morrow morning matters will have assumed official regularity, and by the time the gates are open to the public the displays, of which a running note is here given, will be ready for general inspection.

FAVORS DAY LABOR.

Trades and Labor Council Protest Against the Contract System.

At the last meeting of the Victoria Trades and Labor council the action of Ald. Lendingham in proposing that the sewers should be constructed by day's labor, was endorsed, and the following has been sent to the mayor and council:

Gentlemen:—I have been instructed to send you the following preamble and petition: 1st. Whereas, it is one of the standing rules of the Victoria Trades and Labor council that the members thereof shall at all times protest against the principle of the contract system in doing city work by the corporation of the city of Victoria, as it is considered to be in the best interest of the ratepayers and citizens to have all the work that may at any time be undertaken by the aforesaid corporation done by day labor; therefore, it was decided to endorse the action taken by Ald. Lindingham, and also the views expressed by some of the aldermen in favor of doing the work on the extension of the Douglas street sewer by day labor, as it has not been shown that there is anything in the by-law or municipal act to prevent any of the sewerage work to be done by day labor. It was further decided to petition your humble body to have the said extension of the Douglas street sewer done by day labor, and further that the matter should be referred or left in the hands of your [illegible] committee, [illegible] that they may take our petition and give it the greatest consideration, and your petitioners will ever pray.

Secretary on behalf of the Victoria Trades and Labor Council.

There Was Little Interest and a Light Vote.

The election to fill a vacancy in the school board caused by the resignation of J. Stuart Yates took place to-day and passed off very quietly. There was only one polling place, that at the market hall, and at no time during the day was there a crowd there. The vote was as follows:

Lewis	161
McKenzie	123

THEIR HOUSE-WARMING.

Members of the Pacific Club Entertain Their Friends.

The Pacific Club held its house-warming on Saturday night, and besides the members, who number 75, there were about two hundred visitors present. In the billiard hall an impromptu programme in which Professor W. Edgar Buck, George Jay, jr., H. E. A. Robertson, Norman Macaulay and W. Greig assisted, was given. All of the rooms were thrown open to the visitors, and they enjoyed themselves at billiards, pool and cards. There was an active reception committee on the floor and everyone was looked after. Late in the evening light refreshments were served. The club house, which is the same occupied by the old Victoria club, has been renovated, refurnished and generally improved. It looked most attractive Saturday evening with its crowded rooms.

The new club begins life under favorable auspices. It already has 75 members with every prospect of increasing the figure to one hundred in the next few weeks. Among the members are some of the most representative business and commercial men in the city.
